

Looking for grants? Look to www.grants.gov

One source for more than $360 billion in annual Federal grants.

Dear Colleague:

As we pass our first anniversary, I'm writing to invite you to take a fresh look at www.Grants.gov. We are making the one site for all Federal grants better and better—so it's of even greater value to your organization and the grant community members you serve.

At Grants.gov it's easier to find grant opportunities. And it's easier to apply for grants than ever before. That's why thousands of grant-seeking groups are turning first to Grants.gov. In fact, in one year we've grown to more than 5 million page views each month, sending more than 700,000 emails weekly detailing new grant opportunities, and have received nearly 1,500 online grant applications.

We're committed to making Grants.gov the most convenient and cost-efficient site for Federal grants. Since launching Grants.gov, we've added new content, increased and enhanced online user tools, and made reaching personalized customer support faster.

It all adds up to make Grants.gov the place for potential grant applicants to quickly find the best grant opportunities to meet their needs and to apply for grants electronically—saving time and money.

Take a minute to learn more about Grants.gov by reviewing the enclosed details. I've included an overview brochure, an insert about our latest enhancements, and words from just a few of our numerous satisfied customers from throughout the grant community.

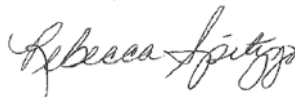

Then visit Grants.gov and see for yourself why we're excited about this rapidly growing and constantly improving site for Federal grants. And sharing the excitement with your grant community members is easy...

- Link your own website to Grants.gov
- Include helpful Grants.gov information—available in our “Resources” section—in your newsletters, publications, or at seminars and meetings
- Have a Grants.gov representative participate in conferences, trade shows, and special events
- Encourage your grant community member to visit and register at Grants.gov in preparation for the 2005 grant season

Already over 3,000 grant-applicant organizations have enrolled to apply for grants via Grants.gov. With a new fiscal year upon us, we believe your grant community members will want to enroll to take advantage of Grants.gov's many benefits for finding and applying for Federal grants.

I look forward to partnering with you to support your grant community members and keeping you informed of even more Grants.gov enhancements coming soon.

Cordially,

Rebecca Spitzgo
Grants.gov Program Manager support@grants.gov

P.S. Watch for more information in January on participating in a special webcast presentation about Grants.gov and how to get the word out to your grant community members.

